Why you Should Attend?

Auditing culture is a growing topic with many organisations starting on their journey to understanding how to approach it. The IIA requires us as professionals to understand the risk in our businesses and build it into our risk assessments and then potentially our audit plans.

But where to start? Attending this workshop will help you undertake that risk assessment, understand how you can shape an audit to tackle those areas of biggest risk whether that be in design effectiveness or operating effectiveness. It will give you practical tools to help you design the audit and best use the audit team to help you deliver.

We will hear stories of audits in this field undertaken over the last 5-6 years with different approaches and techniques, understand which techniques are emerging as the most compelling and successful and will undertake practical experience of how to run workshops and focus groups to understand the culture on the ground.

We will explore how to arrive at findings, and how to write reports in this area that are compelling and engaging for both senior leaders and audit committee members.
