Why you should attend

In today's ever-changing world, organizations are continuously faced with risks. These risks can have catastrophic impacts on an organization's success, reputation, and future. Unmanaged risk is the greatest source of waste in your business and in our economy as a whole.

When these risk events happen, thousands of jobs get lost, brilliant organizations are disassembled, expertise gets lost, and assets are destroyed. Yet all of these risks can be understood, identified, anticipated, mitigated, or reversed, thereby averting hundreds of billions of dollars in unnecessary losses.

Enterprise risk management (ERM) is often times an overlooked or under implemented function, leaving organizations vulnerable and unprepared. This course will provide you with the fundamental concepts necessary to understand this function.

This course has been updated to include COSO 2017 and ISO 31000, the most up to date risk assessment technique and procedure.

Participants will acquire knowledge of the evolutionary and fluid process of developing, implementing, and evaluating ERM.

Who Should Attend

Any executive or manager tasked with establishing, implementing or facilitating a business risk process or anyone tasked with providing assurance to senior management that the significant risks are being managed appropriately.
